Chris loved her children and her husband, it was very clear that they were her priority. However it was important to her that each year the hunting camp was provided with an abundance of good food, so the guys could enjoy their time together. Nobody had to orchestrate who was bringing what, Chris took care of it. That's who she was. And she's missed, not for the food or planning, but for who she was, a loving parent, wife, grandmother and simply a good person.
