I'm struggling with you being gone. I'm rereading this obituary as if it just cannot be true. You were a bright light, and the world seems a bit darker now. I will continue to embarrass and pick on your sisters for you in hopes it will help make them laugh to ease their pain of you being gone. & I know you'll forever appreciate it. I will miss your stories that just never seemed to end, kept going on and on and on to where we all lost our train of thoughts. Lol. Well, I'll most certainly miss that smile when you tried to act like I was not as funny as I really am. We both know the facts here, bud, I'm funny. I miss you, you good lookin goofball. I hope it is nice wherever you are, and we'll all be together again one day. Xoxo- biggest sis

I remember you coming with Adina to meet me before covid and everything that followed. Ava and I weren't so sure about you, but you were so polite and then you started talking about how much you love your Mom and how she's the world to you. And then I knew - you had a good heart and good intentions. Our family is full of emotions with your passing and I cannot help but think of your Mom who means the world to you. I am lighting a candle for you and for her. I will never forget you and how tall you were in my low ceiling townhouse. I pray that you Rest In Peace and know that you were so loved and cherished by so many. I wish you wouldn't have dashed through so quickly. God Bless Your Mom and Family.
