My Daddy,My First Love ... I miss you so much sometimes it feels like my chest could collapse. It's hard, Dad. It's really hard. I never imagined I'd be without you. You had always promised you'd be around for a long, long time. I know this was not in your plans. You were tougher than I will ever be... Our Superman! My only comfort is that I know you loved me with everything you had and I know that you fought the hardest battles. I'm so proud of you Daddy. I love you more than anything in the world, Jenni xoxoxo

I can honestly say that from the very first time I met Mr Dyer I was made to feel like I was part of the family. There were times I would visit even if there daughters weren't there. They made you feel that welcome all the time. I must admit that when I was a teen , at first glance, I was a bit intimidated by him. He was a man of great stature and presence. That feeling was fleeting tho as he made you feel at home right away. It has been many years since I last saw him but he has always maintained a special place in my heart. I must say that I won't miss him as much knowing that, as good of a person and father as he was, he is with God. I will be saying a special prayer for him and his family tonight.
