They mourned at the passing of the One who brought love and life, as we mourn our Harry whose smile would light up a room--a man of friendship and courtesy. Now we know that he and the Great Teacher live another life that we shall soon see. We miss Harry and words cannot express your own sorrow. Our sympathy. Sonny and Paul

Just a silly story about my dad...One Saturday evening I was watching the old Studio Wrestling on tv and when it was over my dad got me ready to go out. I must have been 10 or 11. Next thing I remember, we are parking at Baldwin High School. We walk up and buy tickets and enter the gym that was set up with a wrestling ring. The feature was a big tag team match with Jumpin Johnny Defazio and his partner and the "bad guys" were George "the animal" Steele and his partner. At one point, George is on the outside of the ropes standing up above us sitting at ring side. He had a "foreign object" that was half of an unscrewed pen used to cheat and it was pinned to his leg by a seam in his outfit. Next thing I know, my dad gets up and snatches the pen. The whole audience gasped and when my dad held up the pen, they roared. George turned around and did his famous roaring bellow and then jumped down from the ring and landed right in front of me. He was gigantic and my dad ran away and George roared again with the audience going wild. It was awesome!
