Tucked into our hearts and minds is the treasure chest filled with memories that include Joe, Mary Lou, Nick and Mike: splashing in the pool, calling from the kitchen window, standing in the driveway, leaning into the car window for a gentle conversation. Home was home to the whole Connors family partly because of the constancy and dependable outpouring of love from the Mangieri family. I remember the great comfort they all were to us when we lost our mother suddenly over twenty years ago. The slapping of the screen door in the kitchen, followed by one of their voices was such a warm and melodic gift to us. The wafting of freshly baked bread through the door, the tasty nurturing of our bellies and our souls, coupled with kind and sincerely interested conversation...these were the ever present gifts that came with good neighbors. We were blessed to live next door for so long, and will always consider you our most intimate friends. Our hearts ache at the immense loss. And yet they rejoice in the knowledge of our Savior and a promised reunion with Joe and all others we hold dear.

After working with Joe for 42 years, even though a long distance, it still feels like family. He was always so happy to talk about his family. You could feel the pride though the phone. His kindness and calmness is something that so many will always treasure.

While it was my honor to work with Joe for such a short time, I always could count on a smile, a kind greeting, and easy demeanor. He was a pleasure to work with and has been truly missed here at Chromalox. My heartfelt condolences go out to Mary Lou, whom I only met at Joe's retirement luncheon, and his family, who I cannot imagine the feeling of loss and heartache. My prayers go out to you.
